The greater portion of the time in Judge Henderson's court yesterday, was occupied in hearing the case against Elwood J. Jen-kins, charged with the crime of fornication with Miss Childs. The evidence was simi iar to that given before the commissioner on the preliminary examination, and which has been herotofore published in these col-umns. She and Jenkins ere engaged to be married, the underanding being that the event should occur at as soon as a diverse had been obtained, id which he alleges his wife was then and as soon as a diverce had occar committee and which he alleges his wife was then selsing. She further testified that she was ow in a delicate condition. Thursday morning last, Deputy Marshal Pratt reached this city from Ogden. He was seen by The Herald representative in the Wasatch building, and in response as horetofore will form a part of the Silver who held up the train." It was under stood at the time that Deputy Pratt had one of the fellows arrested in Oxden with him, and that he was taking him to Montrose for some purpose. He was accompanied by Sheriff Belang, of Oxden, and Sheriff Fowler, of Provo. The man in the enstedy of the officers was named Joseph May, and they proceeded as far as Montrose, Col., where he showed them where the horses and other property had been disposed of, and later piloted them to to a point thirty miles south of Thempson's Springs, where the shirts worn by the fellows at the time of the hold-up, the masks and other property were secreted. This was all taken in charge by the officers, and they returned, passing through this city on Sunday morning. Day made from Thompson's Springs at the time the sobbery occurred, and said they would be able to prove their whereabouts if they were given a chance to procure their witnesses, all of whom were in the southern part of the country. When asked by the reporter why they did not come along quietly if they were inneed, they gave as reason for their action that it was done in revenge, because Bush had not kept thith with them in his promise not to use froms.

The filmsy character of the testimony in treduced at the examination before the commissioner will also be remembered, and there was a generally expressed doubt at the time that the grand lary would indict. Whether the indictment has yet been found could not be learned yesterday, but if not, then the case WILL CERTAINLY BE DONORED.

Deputy Peat will pass through this city this morning for Provo with Joseph May, and it is understood arrangements have been made by which he will turn state's evidence. This, however, would seem to be hardly nocessary, in the face of the fact that his accomplise has already admitted by while.

that his accomplies has already admitted his guilt.

It is further stated that both Fisher and Day came to Salt Lake very soon after the robbers occurred and that while Franks. Hosh and others were scouring the southern country, searching for them, they were having a hilarious time in this city. Later, they went to Oyden, where they got into the trouble heretofore detailed in these columns, which outminated in their arrest and the subsequent belief that they got into the trouble heretofore detailed in these columns, which culminate and interesting remarks on antomy tailed in these columns, which culminate and interesting remarks on antomy that their arrest and the subsequent belief that they was the first property of curies and Rumrill.

Just what disposition will be made of the latter remains to be seen. It is asserted that they can be proven guilty of horse it stealing beyond a doubt but even this, to a man up a tree, is questionable. It is also chained that Curtis is wanted at Albiquorque, for train weeking, and that other officers are anxious to get their hands on Rumrill. A few days will probably be necessary to decide whether they will be held or turned loose again, to go on their way rejoicing.

Deputy Pratt was in high spirits when seen by a Hents of the spirits and the spirits when seen

As she proceeded with her remarks ber easy command of language, fluent and distinct delivery and graceful manner became manifest. Her lecture was full of interest and instructiveness, the usually dry facts of physiology and hygons assume an entirely different aspect under her treatment. Close attention was bestowed during the two hours of her lecture. In speaking of children she said that mother's stody how to raise flowers, but when it comes to knowledge of proper ways to raise children they are in ignorance. Great care is taken in raising house plants and each our is breated differently, according to its nature; not so with children threy are in ignorance. They are all brought up in the same way, no matter what their temperaments may be. The lecturer then spoke of the unhealthy and unmatural fashion of lucing, and put the question to the house whether men preferred the slender or natural waist. No one vated for the former, willenearly the entire audience voted in favor of the latter.

Mrs. Potts unshrouded the skeleton and made some interesting remarks on anatom; and elid parts of the latter.
